INTRODUCTION.

THE Compiler of "English Grammar, adapted to the different Classes of Learners," having been frequently solicited to publish an Abridgment of that work, for the use of children commencing their grammatical studies, he hopes that the epitome which he now offers to the public, will be found useful and satisfactory.

HIS chief view in presenting the book in this form, is, to preserve the larger work from being torn and defaced by the younger scholars, in their first study of the general outline which it prescribes; and, consequently, to render their application to each part both new and inviting. If a small volume is better adapted to the taste of children than a large one; and more readily engages their attention, from the apparent shortness of the road they have to travel, the Abridgment will thence derive additional recommendations. To give these arguments the greatest weight, the book is neatly bound, and printed in a fair letter, and on good paper.

A slight inspection of the manner in which the work is executed, will show that it is not, in any case, intended to supply the place, or supersede the use, of the original Grammar. If, however, the teachers of such children as can devote but a small part of their time to this study, should think proper to make use of it, they will not, it is imagined, find it more defective than abridgments are in general. It exhibits a general scheme of the subjects of Grammar ; and contains definitions and rules, which the Compiler has endeavoured to render as exact, concise, and intelligible, as the nature of the subject would admit.

THE tutors who may adopt this Abridgment merely as an introduction to the larger Grammar, will perceive in it a material advantage, which other short works do not possess; namely, that the progress of their pupils will be accelerated, and the pleasure of study increased, when they find themselves advanced to a grammar, which exactly pursues the plan of the book they have studied; and which does not perplex them with new definitions, and discordant views of their subject. The scholars also, who, in other seminaries, may be confined to this epitome, will be more readily invited afterwards to pursue the study of Grammar, when they perceive, from the intimate connection of the books, the facility with which they may improve themselves in the art.

THE Compiler thinks it would be improper to increase the size and expense of this Abridgment, by annexing to it any Exercises in Orthography and Punctuation; since he has already published a distinct volume of English Exercises, which will be found proportionably applicable, both to this work, and to the original Grammar.

As, however, the business of parsing, and some Exercises in Syntax, are necessary to the young Grammarian, examples for these purposes could not be properly omitted; and therefore an Exemplification of the Parts of Speech, and a few instances of False Syntax, under each of these rules, are subjoined in the form of an Appendix.

It may justly be doubted whether there is any ground for objection to the following compilation, on account of the additional cost it will occasion. The preservation of the larger Grammar, by using the Abridgment, may, in most instances, make amends for the charge of the latter. But were this not the case, it is hoped the period has passed away, in which the important business of education was, too often, regulated or influenced by a parsimonious economy.

The Compiler presumes that no objection can properly be made to the phraseology, from an idea that, in books of this kind, the language should be brought down to the level of what is familiar to children. It is indeed indispensable, that our words and phrases should, without requiring much attention and explanation, be intelligible to young persons; but it will scarcely be controverted, that it is better to lead them forward, and improve their language, by proper examples, than to exhibit such as will confirm them in a feeble and puerile mode of expression. Children have language, as well as other things, to learn and cultivate; and if good models are set before them, instruction and diligence will soon make them understood, and habit will render them familiar and pleasing. Perhaps there is no method by which this advantage may, in general, be more readily and effectually produced, than by accustoming children to commit to memory, sentences in which the words are properly chosen, and the construction and arrangement correct. This was one object which the Compiler had in view, when he composed the Grammar of which this is an epitome; and he hopes that he has not altogether failed in his endeavours to attain it.—But on this point, or on any other part of the work, it belongs not to him to determine: the whole must be referred to the decision of the impartial and judicious reader.

ENGLISH GRAMMAR.

ENGLISH GRAMMAR is the art of speaking and writing the English language with propriety.

It is divided into four parts, viz. ORTHOGRAPHY, ETYMOLOGY, SYNTAX, and PROSODY.

ORTHOGRAPHY.

LETTERS.

An articulate sound, is the sound of the human voice, formed by the organs of speech.

Orthography teaches the nature and powers of letters, and the just method of spelling words.

A letter is the first principle, or least part, of a word.

The letters of the English language, called the English Alphabet, are twenty-six in number.

The following is a list of the Roman and Italick Characters.

Roman.		Italick.		Name.
Cap.	Small.	Cap.	Small.
A	a	A	a	ai
B	b	B	b	bee
C	c	C	c	see
D	d	D	d	dee
E	e	E	e	ee
F	f	F	f	ef
G	g	G	g	jee
H	h	H	h	aitch
I	i	I	i	i or eye
J	j	J	j	jay
K	k	K	k	kay
L	l	L	l	el
M	m	M	m	em
N	n	N	n	en
O	o	O	o	o
P	p	P	p	pee
Q	q	Q	q	cue
R	r	R	r	ar
S	s	S	s	ess
T	t	T	t	tee
U	u	U	u	u or you
V	v	V	v	vee
W	w	W	w	double u
X	x	X	x	eks
Y	y	Y	y	wy
Z	z	Z	z	zed.

Letters are divided into vowels and consonants.

A vowel is a simple articulate sound, formed by the impulse of the voice, and by opening the mouth in a particular manner.

A consonant cannot be perfectly sounded by itself; but, joined with a vowel, forms an articulate sound, by a particular motion or contact of the parts of the mouth.

The vowels are, a, e, i, o, u, and sometimes æ and y.

W and y are consonants when they begin a word or syllable; but in every other situation they are called vowels.

Consonants are divided into mutes and semi-vowels.

The mutes cannot be sounded at all without a vowel, and they all begin their sound with a consonant; as, b, d, g, k, p, q, t, and c hard, which are expressed be, de, te, &c.

The semi-vowels have an imperfect sound of themselves, and all begin with a vowel; as, f, l, m, n, r, s, &c. which are sounded ef, el, em, &c.

Four of the semi-vowels, namely, l, m, n, r, are also distinguished by the name of liquids, from their readily uniting with other consonants, and flowing as it were into their sounds.

A diphthong is the union of two vowels, pronounced by a single impulse of the voice; as, ea in beat, ou in found.

A triphthong, the union of three vowels, pronounced in like manner; as, eau in beau, ieu in view.

A proper diphthong is that in which both the vowels are sounded; as, oi in voice, ou in ounce.

An improper diphthong has but one of the vowels sounded; as, ea in eagle, oa in boat.

SYLLABLES.

A syllable is a sound either simple or compounded, pronounced by a single impulse of the voice, and constituting a word, or part of a word; as, man, man-ful.

Spelling is the art of rightly dividing words into their syllables; or of expressing a word by its proper letters.

WORDS.

Words are articulate sounds used, by common consent, as signs of our ideas.

A word of one syllable is termed a mono-syllable; a word of two syllables, a dissyllable; a word of three syllables, a trisyllable; and a word of four or more syllables, a polysyllable.

All words are either primitive, or derivative.

Primitive words are those which cannot be reduced to any simpler words in the language; as man, good, content.

Derivative words are those which may be reduced to other words in English of greater simplicity; as, manful, goodness, contentment.

ETYMOLOGY.

THE second part of Grammar is Etymology: which treats of the different sorts of words, their derivation, and the various modifications by which the sense of a primitive word is diversified.

There are in English nine sorts of words, or, as they are commonly called, PARTS OF SPEECH; namely, the ARTICLE, the SUBSTANTIVE OR NOUN, the PRONOUN, the ADJECTIVE, the VERB, the ADVERB, the PREPOSITION, the CONJUNCTION, and the INTERJECTION.

1. An Article is a word prefixed to substantives, to point them out, and to show how far their signification extends; as, a garden, an eagle, the woman.

2. A Substantive or noun is the name of any thing that exists, or of which we have any notion; as, man, virtue, London.

A substantive may, in general, be distinguished by its taking an article before it, or by its making sense of itself; as, a book, the sun, an apple; temperance, industry, chastity.

3. A Pronoun is a word used instead of a noun, to avoid the too frequent repetition of the same word; as, The man is happy; he is benevolent; he is useful.

4. An Adjective is a word added to a substantive, to express its quality; as, An industrious man, a virtuous woman.

An adjective may be known by its making sense with the addition of the word thing; as, a good thing, a bad thing: or of any particular substantive; as, a sweet apple, a pleasant prospect.

5. A Verb is a word which signifies to BE, to DO, or to SUFFER: as, "I am, I rule, I am ruled."

A verb may be distinguished by its making sense with any of the personal pronouns, or the word to, before it; as, I walk, he plays, they write; or, to walk, to play, to write.

6. An Adverb is a part of speech joined to a verb, an adjective, and sometimes to another adverb, to express some quality or circumstance respecting it; as, he reads well; a truly good man; he writes very correctly.

An adverb may be generally known, by its answering to the question, How? How much? When? or Where? as, in the phrase “He reads correctly,” the answer to the question, How does he read? is, correctly.

7. Prepositions serve to connect words with one another, and to show the relation between them; as, “He went from London to York;” “she is above disguise;” “they are supported by industry.”

A preposition may be known by its admitting after it a personal pronoun, in the objective case; as, with, for, to, &c. will allow the objective case after them; with him, for her, to them, &c.

8. A Conjunction is a part of speech that is chiefly used to connect or join together sentences; so as, out of two, to make one sentence: it sometimes connects only words: as,

“Thou and he are happy, because you are good.”

“Two and three are five.”

9. Interjections are words thrown in between the parts of a sentence, to express the passions or emotions of the speaker; as, “O virtue! how amiable art thou!”

ARTICLE.

An Article is a word prefixed to substantives, to point them out, and to show how far their signification extends; as, a garden, an eagle, the woman.

In English there are but two articles, a and the; a becomes an before a vowel, and before a silent h: as, an acorn, an hour. But if the h be sounded, the a only is to be used; as, a hand, a heart, a highway.

A or an is styled the indefinite article: it is used in a vague sense to point out one single thing of the kind, in other respects indeterminate; as, “Give me a book;” that is any book.

The is called the definite article, because it ascertains what particular thing is meant; as, “Give me the book;” meaning some book referred to.

A substantive, without any article to limit it, is taken in its widest sense; as, “A candid temper is proper for man;” that is, for all mankind.

SUBSTANTIVE.

A Substantive or noun is the name of any thing that exists, or of which we have any notion; as, man, virtue, London, &c.

Substantives are either proper or common.

Proper names or substantives, are the names appropriated to individuals; as, George, London, Thames.

Common names or substantives, stand for kinds containing many sorts, or for sorts containing many individuals under them; as, animal, man, tree, &c.

To substantives belong gender, number, and case; and they are all of the third person, when spoken of, and of the second, when spoken to: as, “Blessings attend us on every side.” “Be grateful, ye children of men!”

GENDER.

Gender is the distinction of sex. There are three genders, the Masculine, the Feminine, and the Neuter.

The masculine gender denotes animals of the male kind; as, a man, a horse, &c.

The feminine gender signifies animals of the female kind; as, a woman, a princess, &c.

The neuter gender denotes objects which are neither males nor females; as, a field, a house, &c.

Some substantives naturally neuter are, by a figure of speech, converted into the masculine or feminine gender; as, when we say of the sun, he is setting, and of a ship, she sails well, &c.

NUMBER.

Number is the consideration of an object, as one or more.

Substantives <sup>have</sup> ~~are of~~ two numbers, the singular and the plural.

The singular number expresses but one object; as, a chair, a table.

The plural number signifies more objects than one; as, chairs, tables.

Some nouns, from the nature of the things which they express, are used only in the singular, others only in the plural, form; as, wheat, pitch, gold, cloth, pride, &c. and bellows, scissors, lungs, riches, &c.

Case.

Nouns have 3. Cases.

1. The Nominative.

2. The Genitive, or Possessive.

3. The Accusative, or Objective.

Observe, The Nomin. & Object. Cases are always the same.

The Nomin. expresses the name of a thing - goes before the Verb.

Answers to the Question who,
or what? -

The Objective Case is so called, because it is the Object of the Verb, which it follows, & answers to the Question whom, or what? -

Some words are the same in both numbers; as, deer, sheep, swine, &c.

The plural number of nouns is generally formed by adding s to the singular; as, dove, doves; face, faces; thought, thoughts. But when the substantive singular ends in x, ch, sh, or se, we add es in the plural; as, box, boxes; church, churches; lath, lathes; kiss, kisses.

Nouns ending in f or se, are generally rendered plural by the change of those terminations into ves; as, loaf, loaves; wife, wives. Those which end in ff have the regular plural, as, ruff, ruffs.

Such as have y in the singular, with no other vowel in the same syllable, change it into ies in the plural; as, beauty, beauties; fly, flies: but the y is not changed, when there is another vowel in the syllable; as, key, keys; delay, delays.

CASE.

The cases of substantives signify their different terminations, which serve to express the relations of one thing to another.

In English, substantives have but two cases, the Nominative, and Possessive or Genitive.

The nominative case simply expresses the name of a thing, or the subject of the verb; as, "The boy plays;" "The girls learn."

The possessive or genitive case expresses the <sup>is formed</sup> relation of property or possession; and has an ~~relation of~~ by adding S with an Apostrophe ' to the Nominative, as, Ox, Ox's; Men, Men's: The Boy's Top, the Girl's Doll.

When the plural ends in s, the other s is omitted, but the apostrophe is retained; as, "On eagles' wings;" "The drapers' company."

Sometimes also, when the singular <sup>ends</sup> ~~terminates~~ in s, the apostrophick s is not added; as, "For goodness' sake;" "For righteousness' sake."

English substantives may be declined in the following manner:

	SINGULAR.	PLURAL.
Nominative Case.	A mother.	Mothers.
Possessive Case.	A mother's.	Mothers'.
Objective Case.	A mother.	Mothers.
	SINGULAR.	PLURAL.
Nominative Case.	The man.	The men.
Possessive Case.	The man's.	The men's.
Object. case.	The man.	The men.

PRONOUNS.

A Pronoun is a word used instead of a noun, to avoid the too frequent repetition of the same word; as, "The man is happy," "he is benevolent," "he is useful."

There are four kinds of pronouns, viz. the Personal, the Possessive, the Relative, and the Adjective Pronouns.

PERSONAL PRONOUNS.

There are five Personal Pronouns; viz. I, thou, he, she, it; with their plurals, we, ye or you, they.

Personal pronouns admit of person, number, gender, and case.

The persons of pronouns are three in each of the numbers, viz.

I , is the first person	} Singular.
Thou , is the second person
He, she , or it , is the third person
We , is the first person	} Plural.
Ye or you , is the second person
They , is the third person

The numbers of pronouns, like those of substantives, are two, the singular and the plural; as, I, thou, he; we, ye, they.

Gender has respect only to the third person singular of the pronouns, he, she, it. He is masculine; she is feminine; it is neuter.

Personal pronouns have three cases; the nominative, the possessive, and the objective.

The objective case follows the verb active, or the preposition, expressing the object of an action, or of a relation.

The personal pronouns are thus declined.

	SINGULAR.	PLURAL.
Nom.	I.	We.
Possess.	Mine.	Ours.
Object.	Me.	Us.
	SINGULAR.	PLURAL.
Nom.	Thou.	Ye or you.
Possess.	Thine.	Yours.
Obj.	Thee.	You.
	SINGULAR.	PLURAL.
Nom.	He.	They.
Possess.	His.	Theirs.
Obj.	Him.	Them.
	SINGULAR.	PLURAL.
Nom.	She.	They.
Possess.	Hers.	Theirs.
Obj.	Her.	Them.
	SINGULAR.	PLURAL.
Nom.	It.	They.
Possess.	Its.	Theirs.
Obj.	It.	Them.

POSSESSIVE PRONOUNS.

The Possessive Pronouns are such as principally relate to possession or property.

There are seven of them; viz. my, thy, his, her, our, your, their.

Mine and thine, instead of my and thy, were formerly used before a substantive or adjective beginning with a vowel or a silent h; as, "Blot out all mine iniquities."

RELATIVE PRONOUNS.

Relative Pronouns are such as relate to some word or phrase going before, which is thence called the antecedent: they are who, which, and that; as, "The man is happy who lives virtuously."

What is a kind of compound relative, including both the antecedent and the relative, and is equivalent to that which; as, "This is what I wanted;" that is to say, "the thing which I wanted."

Who is applied to persons, which to animals and inanimate things; as, "He is a friend, who is faithful in adversity;" "The bird, which sung so sweetly, is flown;" "This is the tree, which produces no fruit."

That, as a relative, is often used to prevent the too frequent repetition of who and which. It is applied to <sup>Numbers, & also to</sup> both persons and things; as, “He that acts wisely deserves praise;” “Modesty is a quality that highly adorns a woman.”

Who is of both numbers, and is thus declined:

SINGULAR AND PLURAL.

Nominative.	Who.
Possessive.	Whose.
Objective.	Whom.

Who, which, what, are called Interrogatives, when they are used in asking questions: as, “Who is he?” “Which is the book?” “What art thou doing?”

ADJECTIVE PRONOUNS.

Adjective Pronouns are of a mixed nature, <sup>having</sup> participating the properties both of the pronoun and the adjective. The following are of this class; each, every, either; this, that, and their plurals, these, those; some, one, any, all, and such.

The adjective pronouns may be ~~be~~ divided into three sorts, namely, the distributive, the demonstrative, and the indefinite.

1. The distributive are those which denote the persons or things that make up a number, as taken separately and singly. They are each, every, either; as, “Each of his brothers is in a favourable situation;” “Every man must account for himself;” “I have not seen either of them.”

2. The demonstrative, are those which precisely point out the subjects to which they relate: this and that, these and those are of this class; as, “This is true charity; that is only its image.”

This refers to the nearest person or thing, and that to the more distant: as, “This man is more intelligent than that.” This <sup>points out</sup> indicates the latter, or last mentioned; that, the former, or first mentioned: as, “Wealth and poverty are both temptations; that, tends to excite pride, this, discontent.”

3. The indefinite are those which express their subjects in an indefinite or general manner. The following are of this kind: some, ether, any, one, all, such, &c.

Other is declined in the following manner:

	SINGULAR	PLURAL.
Nom.	other	others.
Poss.	other's	others'.
Obj.	other	others.

ADJECTIVES.

An Adjective is a word added to a substantive, to express its quality; as, "An industrious man;" "A virtuous woman;" "A benevolent mind."

In English, the adjective is not varied on account of gender, number, or case. Thus we say, "A careless boy; careless girls."

The only variation which it admits of, is that of the degrees of comparison.

There are commonly reckoned three degrees of comparison; the positive, comparative, and superlative.

The positive ~~state~~ expresses the quality of an object, without any increase or diminution; as, good, wise, great.

The comparative degree increases or lessens the positive in signification; as, wiser, greater, less wise.

The superlative degree increases or lessens the positive to the highest or lowest degree; as, wisest, greatest, least wise.

The simple word, or positive, becomes comparative by adding r or er; and the superlative by adding st or est, to the end of it. And the adverbs more and most, placed before the adjective, have the same effect; as, wise, more wise, most wise.

Monosyllables for the most part, are compared by er or est; and dissyllables by more and most; as, mild, milder, mildest; frugal, more frugal, most frugal.

Some words of very common use are irregularly formed: as, “good, better, best; bad, worse, worst; little, less, least; much or many, more, most;” and a few others.

VERBS.

A Verb is a word which signifies to BE, to DO, or to SUFFER; as, “I am, I rule, I am ruled.”

Verbs are of three kinds; ACTIVE, PASSIVE, and NEUTER. They are also divided into REGULAR, IRREGULAR, and DEFECTIVE.

A Verb Active expresses an action, and necessarily implies an agent, and an object acted upon; as, to love; “I love Penelope.”

A Verb Passive expresses a passion, or a suffering, or the receiving of an action; and necessarily implies an object acted upon, and an agent by which it is acted upon; as, to be loved, “Penelope is loved by me.”

A Verb Neuter expresses neither action nor passion; but being, or a state or condition of being; as, "I am, I sleep, I sit."

Auxiliary or Helping Verbs, are those by the help of which the English verbs are principally conjugated; they are, do, be, have, shall, will, may, can, with their variations; and let and must, which have no variation.

To verbs belong NUMBER, PERSON, MOOD, and TENSE.

NUMBER AND PERSON.

Verbs have two numbers, the Singular and the Plural; as, "I run, we run," &c.

In each number there are three persons; as,

	SINGULAR.	PLURAL.
First Person.	I love.	We love.
Second Person.	Thou lovest.	Ye love.
Third Person.	He loves.	They love.

MOODS.

Mood or Mode is a particular form of the verb, shewing the manner in which the being, action, or passion, is represented.

There are five moods of verbs, the INDICATIVE, the IMPERATIVE, the POTENTIAL, the SUBJUNCTIVE, and the INFINITIVE.

The Indicative Mood simply indicates or declares a thing ; as, “ He loves ; he is loved : ” or it asks a question ; as, “ Does he love ? Is he loved ? ”

The Imperative Mood is used for commanding, exhorting, entreating, or permitting ; as, “ Depart thou ; mind ye ; let us stay ; go in peace.”

The Potential Mood implies possibility or liberty, power, will, or obligation ; as, “ It may rain ; he may go or stay ; I can ride ; he would walk ; they should learn.”

The Subjunctive Mood represents a thing under a condition, motive, wish, supposition, &c. ; and is preceded by a conjunction, expressed or understood, and attended by another verb ; as, “ I will respect him, though he chide me ; ” “ Were he good, he would be happy : ” that is, “ if he were good.”

The Infinitive Mood expresses a thing in a general and unlimited manner, without any distinction of number or person ; as, “ to act, to speak, to be feared.”

The Participle is a certain form of the verb, and derives its name from its participating, not only the properties of a verb, but also those of an adjective ; as, “ I am desirous of knowing him;" "Admired and applauded, he became vain;" "having finished his work, he submitted it;" &c

There are three Participles, the Present or Active, the Perfect or Passive, and the compound Perfect: as, "loving, loved, having loved."

THE TENSES.

Tense, being the distinction of time, might seem to admit only of the present, past, and future; but to mark it more accurately, it is made to consist of six variations, viz. the PRESENT, the IMPERFECT, the PERFECT, the PLUPERFECT, and the FIRST and SECOND FUTURES.

The Present Tense represents an action or event as passing at the time in which it is mentioned; as, "I rule; I am ruled; I think; I fear."

The Imperfect Tense represents the action or event, either as past and finished, or as remaining unfinished at a certain time past; as, "I loved her for her modesty and virtue;" "They were travelling post when he met them."

The Perfect Tense not only refers to what is past, but also conveys an allusion to the present time ; as, “ I have finished my letter ; ” “ I have seen the person that was recommended to me.”

The Pluperfect Tense represents a thing, not only as past, but also as prior to some other point of time specified in the sentence ; as, “ I had finished my letter before he arrived.”

The first Future Tense represents the action as yet to come, either with or without respect to the precise time when ; as, “ The sun will rise to-morrow ; ” “ I shall see them again.”

The second Future intimates that the action will be fully accomplished at or before the time of another future action or event ; as, “ I shall have dined at (or before) one o'clock ; ” “ The two houses will have finished their business when (or before) the king comes to prorogue them.”

The Conjugation of a verb is the regular combination and arrangement of its several numbers, persons, moods, and tenses.

The conjugation of an active verb is styled the ACTIVE VOICE ; and that of a passive verb, the PASSIVE VOICE.

The auxiliary and active verb To have, is conjugated in the following manner.

TO HAVE.

Indicative Mood.

PRESENT TENSE.

SINGULAR.

PLURAL.

* The verbs, though conjugated at large through all their tenses, that the learners may, by a full and regular display of them, more completely understand their nature and use, need not be wholly committed to memory, by young persons who are beginning the study of grammar. If the simple tenses, namely, the present and the imperfect, together with the first future tense, should, in the first instance, be committed to memory, and the rest carefully perused and explained, the business will not be tedious to the scholars, and their progress will be rendered more obvious and pleasing. The general view of the subject, thus acquired and impressed, may be afterwards extended with ease and advantage.

Infinitive Mood.

PRESENT. To love.    PERFECT. To have loved.

Participles.

PRESENT. Loving.    PERFECT. Loved.
COMPOUND PERFECT. Having loved.

PASSIVE.

Verbs passive are called regular, when they form their perfect participle by the addition of d or ed, to the verb; as, from the verb “To love,” is formed the passive, “I am loved, I was loved, I shall be loved,” &c.

A regular passive verb is conjugated by adding the perfect participle to the auxiliary to be through all its changes of number, person, mood, and tense, in the following manner.

TO BE LOVED.

IRREGULAR VERBS.

Irregular Verbs are those which do not form their imperfect tense, and their perfect participle, by the addition of <sup>d</sup> or <sup>ed</sup> to the verb; as

PRESENT.	IMPERFECT.	PERFECT PART.
I begin,	I began,	begun.
I know,	I knew,	known.

DEFECTIVE VERBS.

Defective Verbs are those which are used only in some of their moods and tenses: as, am, was, been; can, could; must, &c.

ADVERB.

An Adverb is a part of speech joined to a verb, an adjective, and sometimes to another adverb, to express some quality or circumstance respecting it: as, “He reads well,” “A truly good man:” “He writes very correctly.”

Some adverbs are compared, viz. “Soon, sooner, soonest; often, oftener, oftenest.” And those ending in ly, are compared by more and most; as, “Wisely, more wisely, most wisely.”

PREPOSITION.

Prepositions serve to connect words with one another, and to show the relation between them. They are, for the most part, set before nouns and pronouns: as, "He went from London to York;" "She is above disguise;" "They are supported by industry."

Prepositions are separable or inseparable.

The separable prepositions are those which may be used separately from other words: as, "above, about, over, under, at, after, with," &c.

Some of these are sometimes conjoined with other words: as, "overtake, undertake, afterward."

The inseparable prepositions are used only in the composition of words: such as, be, fore, my, &c.; "Betimes, foretel, misconduct."

The following is a list of the principal prepositions:

of	for	into	within	down
to	by	at	without	on or upon
from	in	with	up	off
over	below	before	beyond	against through	beneath	after	about	among above	under	behind	near	between

CONJUNCTION.

A Conjunction is a part of speech that is chiefly used to connect or join together sentences; so as, out of two, to make one sentence. It sometimes connects only words.

Conjunctions are principally divided into two sorts, the COPULATIVE and DISJUNCTIVE.

The Conjunction Copulative serves to connect or to continue a sentence, by expressing an addition, a supposition, a cause, &c.: as, "He and his brother reside in London;" "I will go, if he will accompany me;" "You are happy, because you are good."

The Conjunction Disjunctive serves, not only to connect and continue the sentence, but also to express opposition of meaning in different degrees: as, "Though he was frequently reproved, yet he did not reform;" "They came with her, but went away without her."

The following is a list of the principal conjunctions:

although	for	so
and	if	that
as	lest	than
because	neither	though
both	notwithstanding	unless
but	nor	yet
either	or

INTERJECTION.

Interjections are words thrown in between the parts of a sentence, to express the passions or emotions of the speaker ; as, “ Oh ! I have alienated my friend ; Alas ! I fear, for life ; ” “ O virtue ? how amiable art thou ! ”

S Y N T A X.

THE third part of Grammar is Syntax, which shows the agreement and right disposition of words in a sentence.

A sentence is an assemblage of words, expressed in proper form, ranged in proper order, and concurring to make a complete sense.

Sentences are of two kinds, SIMPLE and COMPOUND.

A simple sentence has in it but one subject, and one finite verb ; as, “ Life is short.”

A compound sentence contains two or more simple sentences, joined together by one or more connective words ; as, “ Life is short, and art is long.”

A phrase is two or more words rightly put together, in order to make a part of a sentence, and sometimes making a whole sentence.

The principal parts of a simple sentence are, the agent, the <sup>Verb</sup>attribute, and the object.

The agent is the thing chiefly spoken of ;

the attribute is the thing or action affirmed or denied of it; and the object is the thing affected by such action.

The nominative denotes the agent, and usually goes before the verb ~~or attribute~~; and the word or phrase, denoting the object, follows the verb: as, "A wise man governs his passions." Here, a wise man is the agent; governs <sup>Verb,</sup> the ~~attribute~~, or thing affirmed; and his passions, the object.

Syntax principally consists of two parts, Concord and Government.

Concord is the agreement which one word has with another, in gender, number, case, or person.

Government is that power which one part of speech has over another, in <sup>saying it to it</sup> directing its <sup>in some particular</sup> mood, tense, or case.

RULE I.

A verb must agree with it's nominative case, in number and person: as, "I learn;" "Thou art improved;" "The birds sing."

RULE II.

Two or more nouns, &c. in the singular number, joined together by one or more copulative conjunctions, have verbs, nouns, and pronouns agreeing with them in the plural number; as, “Socrates and Plato were wise; they were the most eminent philosophers of Greece;” “The sun that rolls over our heads, the food that we receive, the rest that we enjoy, daily admonish us of a superior and superintending Power.”

RULE III.

The conjunction disjunctive hath an effect contrary to that of the conjunction copulative; for as the verb, noun, or pronoun, is referred to the preceding terms taken separately, it must be in the singular number: as, “Ignorance or negligence has caused this mistake;” “John, or James, or Joseph, intends to accompany me;” “There is, in many minds, neither knowledge nor understanding.”

RULE IV.

A noun of multitude, or signifying many, may have a verb or pronoun agreeing with it, either of the singular or plural number: yet not without regard to the import of the word, as conveying unity or plurality of idea: as, “The meeting was large;” “The parliament is dissolved;" "The nation is powerful;" "My people do not consider: they have not known me;" "The assembly of the wicked have enclosed me;" "The council were divided in their sentiments."

RULE V.

Pronouns must always agree with their antecedents, and the nouns for which they stand, in gender, number, and person; as, "This is the friend whom I love;" "That is the vice which I hate." "The king and the queen had put on their robes;" "The moon appears, and she shines, but the light is not her own."

The relative is of the same person with the antecedent, and the verb agrees with it accordingly: as, "Thou who hast wisdom;" "I, who speak from experience."

RULE VI.

The relative is the nominative case to the verb, when no other nominative comes between it and the verb: as, "The master who taught us;" "The trees which are planted." But when another nominative comes between it and the verb, the relative is governed by some word in its own member of the sentence:

as, “He who preserves me, to whom I owe my being, whom I am, and whom I serve, is eternal.”

RULE VII.

When the relative is preceded by two nominatives of different persons, the relative and verb may agree in person with either: as, “I am the man who command you;” or, “I am the man who commands you.” But the latter nominative is usually preferred.

RULE VIII.

Every adjective belongs to a substantive, expressed or understood: as, “He is a good, as well as a wise man.” “Few are happy,” that is, “persons.”

The adjective pronouns, this and that, &c. must agree in number with their substantives: as, “This book, these books; that fort, those forts; another road, other roads.”

RULE IX.

The article a or an agrees with nouns in the singular number only, individually or collectively: as, “A Christian, an Infidel, a score, a thousand.”

The definite article the may agree with nouns in the singular or plural number: as, “the garden, the houses, the stars.”

The articles are often properly omitted: when used, they should be justly applied, according to their distinct nature: as, “Gold is corrupting; The sea is green; A lion is bold.”

RULE X.

One substantive governs another signifying a different thing, in the possessive or genitive case: as, “My father’s house;” “Man’s happiness;” “Virtue’s reward.”

RULE XI.

Active verbs govern the objective case: as, “Truth ennobles her,” “She comforts me,” “They support us,” “Virtue rewards them that follow her.”

RULE XII.

One verb governs another that follows it, or depends upon it, in the infinitive mood: as, “Cease to do evil; learn to do well.” “We should be prepared to render an account of our actions.”

The preposition to, though generally used before the latter verb, is sometimes proper y omitted: "I heard him say it;" instead of, "to say it."

RULE XIII.

In the use of verbs and words that, in point of time, relate to each other, the order of time must be observed. Instead of saying, "The Lord bath given, and the Lord bath taken away;" we should say, "The Lord gave," &c. Instead of "I remember him these many years;" it should be, "I have remembered him," &c.

RULE XIV.

Participles govern words in the same manner as the verbs do from which they are derived: as, "I am weary with hearing him;" "She is instructing us;" "He was admonishing them."

RULE XV.

Adverbs, though they have no government of case, tense, &c. require an appropriate situation in the sentence, viz. for the most part before adjectives, after verbs active or neuter, and frequently between the auxiliary and the verb: as, "He made a very sensible discourse, he spoke unaffectedly and forcibly, and was attentively heard by the whole assembly."

RULE XVI.

Two negatives, in English, destroy one another, or are equivalent to an affirmative: as, “Nor did they not perceive him;” that is, “they did perceive him.” “Never shall I not confess;” that is, “I shall never avoid confessing;” or, “I shall always confess.” But it is better to express an affirmation by a regular affirmative, than by two negatives.

RULE XVII.

Prepositions govern the objective case: as, “I have heard a good character of her;” “From him that is needy, turn not away;” “A word to the wife is sufficient for them;” “Strength of mind is with them that are pure in heart.”

RULE XVIII.

Conjunctions connect the same moods and tenses of verbs, and cases of nouns and pronouns: as, “Candour is to be approved and practised;” “If thou sincerely desire, and earnestly pursue virtue, she will assuredly be found by thee, and prove a rich reward;” “The master taught her and me to write;” “He and she were school-fellows.”

RULE XIX.

Some conjunctions require the indicative, some the subjunctive mood, after them. It is a general rule, that when something contingent or doubtful is implied, the subjunctive ought to be used: as, “If I were to write, he would not regard it;” “He will not be pardoned, unless he repent.”

Conjunctions that are of a positive and absolute nature require the indicative mood. “As virtue advances so vice recedes;” “He is healthy because he is temperate.”

RULE XX.

When the qualities of different things are compared, the latter noun or pronoun is not governed by the conjunction than or as, (for conjunctions have no government of cases,) but agrees with the verb, or is governed by the verb or the preposition, expressed or understood: as, “Thou art wiser than I;” that is, “than I am.” “They loved him more than me;” i. e. “more than they loved me;” “The sentiment is well expressed by Plato, but much better by Solomon than him;” that is, “than by him.”

RULE XXI.

To avoid disagreeable repetitions, and to express our ideas in few words, an ellipsis or omission of some words is frequently admitted; but when this would obscure the sentence, weaken its force, or be attended with an impropriety, the ellipsis must be supplied. Instead of saying, "He was a learned man, he was a wise man, and he was a good man;" we make use of the ellipsis, and say, "he was a learned, wise, and good man." In the phrase, "Any two men used to think with freedom," the words "who are" should have been supplied. "A beautiful field and trees," is not proper language. It should be "Beautiful fields and trees," or, "A beautiful field and fine trees."

RULE XXII.

All the parts of a sentence should correspond to each other, and a regular and dependent construction, throughout, be carefully preserved. The following sentence is therefore inaccurate: "He was more beloved, but not so much admired, as Cinthio." More requires than after it, which is nowhere found in the sentence. It should be, "He was more beloved than Cinthio, but not so much admired."

PROSODY.

PROSODY consists of two parts; the former teaches the true pronunciation of words, comprising ACCENT, QUANTITY, EMPHASIS, PAUSE, and TONE; and the latter, the laws of VERSIFICATION.

ACCENT.

Accent is the laying of a peculiar stress of the voice on a certain letter or syllable in a word, that it may be better heard than the rest, or distinguished from them: as, in the word prejūme, the stress of the voice must be on the letter a, and second syllable, jūme, which take the accent.

QUANTITY.

The quantity of a syllable is that time which is occupied in pronouncing it. It is considered as long or short.

A vowel or syllable is long, when the accent is on the vowel; which occasions it to be slowly joined, in pronunciation, to the following letter: as, “Fāll, bāle, m̄ōd, hōūse, fēature.”

A syllable is short, when the accent is on the consonant; which occasions the vowel to be quickly joined to the succeeding letter: as, “ar’t, bon’net, hun’ger.”

A long syllable requires double the time of a short one in pronouncing it: thus, “Māte” and “Nōte” should be pronounced as slowly again as “Măt” and “Nőt.”

EMPHASIS.

By emphasis is meant a stronger and fuller sound of voice, by which we distinguish some word or words on which we design to lay particular stress, and to show how it affects the rest of the sentence. Sometimes the emphatic words must be distinguished by a particular tone of voice, as well as by a greater stress.

PAUSES.

Pauses or rests, in speaking and reading, are a total cessation of the voice, during a perceptible, and, in many cases, a measurable space of time.

TONES.

Tones are different both from emphasis and pauses; consisting in the modulation of the voice, the notes or variations of sound which we employ, in the expression of our sentiments.

VERSIFICATION.

Verseification is the arrangement of a certain number and variety of syllables, according to certain laws.

Rhyme is the correspondence of the last sound of one verse, to the last sound or syllable of another.

PUNCTUATION

Is the art of dividing a written composition into sentences, or parts of sentences, by points or stops, for the purpose of marking the different pauses, which the sense and an accurate pronunciation require.

The Comma represents the shortest pause; the Semicolon, a pause double that of the comma; the Colon, double that of the semicolon; and the Period, double that of the colon.

The points are marked in the following manner:

The Comma ,            The Colon :

The Semicolon ;      The Period' .

COMMA.

The Comma usually separates those parts of a sentence, which, though very closely connected in sense, require a pause between them: as, "I remember, with gratitude, his love and services." "Charles is beloved, esteemed, and respected."

SEMICOLON.

The Semicolon is used for dividing a compound sentence into two or more parts, not so closely connected as those which are separated by a comma, nor yet so little dependent on each other, as those which are distinguished by a colon: as, "Straws swim on the surface; but pearls lie at the bottom."

COLON.

The Colon is used to divide a sentence into two or more parts, less connected than those which are separated by a semicolon; but not so independent as separate, distinct sentences: as, "Do not flatter yourselves with the hope of perfect happiness: there is no such thing in the world."

PERIOD.

When a sentence is so complete and independent, as not to be connected in construction with the following sentence, it is marked with a period: as, "Fear God. Honour the King. Have charity towards all men."

---

Besides the points which mark the pauses in discourse, there are others that denote a different modulation of voice, in correspondence to the sense. These are,

The Interrogative point, ?

The Exclamation point, !

The Parenthesis, ( )

as, "Are you sincere?"

"How excellent is a grateful heart!"

"Know then this truth, (enough for man to know,)

"Virtue alone is happiness below."

The following characters are also frequently used in composition.

An Apostrophe, marked thus ': as, "tho' judg'd."

A Caret, marked thus ^: as, "I<sup>am</sup> diligent."

A Hyphen, which is thus marked -: as, "Lap-dog, to-morrow."

The Acute Accent, marked thus ' : as, "Fan'cy." The Grave Accent, thus ` : as, "Fàvour."

The proper mark to distinguish a long syllable, is this ¯ : as, "Rōsy : " and a short one, this ˘ : as, "Fölly." This last mark is called a Breve.

A Diæresis, thus marked ¨, shows that two vowels form separate syllables: as, "Creätor."

A Section is thus marked §.

A Paragraph, thus ¶.

A Quotation has two inverted commas at the beginning, and two direct ones at the end, of a phrase or passage : as,

“The proper study of mankind is man.”

Crotchets or Brackets serve to inclose a particular word or sentence. They are marked thus [ ].

An Index or Hand  points out a remarkable passage.

A Brace } unites three poetical lines; or connects a number of words, in prose, with one common term.

An Asterisk or little star * directs the reader to some note in the margin.

An Ellipsis is thus marked — : as, “K——g,” for King.

An Obelisk, which is marked thus †, and Parallels thus ||, together with the letters of the alphabet and figures, are used as references to the margin.

     prevail.
 He will have determined.
 We shall have agreed.
 Let me depart.

Do thou instruct him.
 Prepare thy lesson.
 Let him consider.
 Let us improve ourselves.
 Know yourselves.
 Let them advance.
 They may offend.
 I can forgive.
 He might surpass them.
 We could overtake
     him.
 I would be happy.
 Ye should repent.
 He may have deceived me.
 They may have forgotten.
 Thou mightst have improved.
 We should have considered.
 To see the sun is pleasant.
 To live well is honourable.

To have conquered himself was his highest praise.

Promoting others' welfare, they advanced their own interest.

He lives respected.

Having resigned his office, he retired.

They are discouraged.

He was condemned.

We have been rewarded.

She had been admired.

Virtue will be rewarded.

The person will have been executed, when the pardon arrives.

Let him be animated.

Be you entreated.

Let them be prepared.

It can be enlarged.

You may be discovered.

He might be convinced.

It would be carested.

I may have been deceived.

They might have been honoured.

To be trusted, we must be virtuous.

To have been admired,
availed him little.

Ridiculed, despised, persecuted, he maintained his principles.

Being reviled, we bless.

Having been deserted,
he became discouraged.

The fight being new,
he startled.

This uncouth figure startled him.

I have searched, I have found it.

They searched those rooms; he was gone.

The book is his; it was mine.

These are yours, those are ours.

Our hearts are deceitful.

Your conduct met their approbation.

None met who could avoid it.

Thy esteem is my honour.

Her work does her credit.

Each must answer the question.

Every heart knows its own sorrows.

Which was his choice?
It was neither.

Hers is finished, thing is to do.

This is what I feared.
That is the thing
which I desired.

Who can preserve himself?

Whose books are these?

Whom have we served?

Some are negligent,
others industrious.

One may deceive one's self.

All have a talent to improve.

Can any dispute it?
Such is our condition.

CHAP. IV.

Adverb, Preposition, Conjunction, and Interjection.

I have seen him once,
perhaps twice.

Thirdly, and lastly, I shall conclude.

This plant is found here, and elsewhere.

Only to-day is properly ours.

The task is already performed.

We could not serve him then, but will hereafter.

We often resolve, but seldom perform.

He is much more promising now than formerly.

We are wisely and happily directed.

He has certainly been diligent, and he will probably succeed.

How sweetly the birds sing!

Why art thou so heedless?

He is little attentive;
nay, absolutely stupid.

When will they arrive?

Where shall we stop?
Mentally and bodily,
we are curiously and wonderfully formed.

They travelled thro'
France, in haste,
towards Italy.

From virtue to vice,
the progress is gradual.

By diligence and frugality, we arrive at competency.

We are often below
our wishes, and above our desert.

Some things make for him, others against him.

By this imprudence,
he was plunged in-
to new difficulties.

Without the aid of charity, he supported himself with credit.

Of his talents much might be said; concerning his integrity, nothing.

On all occasions, she behaved with propriety.

We in vain look for a path between virtue and vice.

He lives within his income.

The house was sold at a great price, and above its value.

She came down stairs slowly, but went briskly up again.

His father and mother and uncle, reside at Rome.

We must be temperate, if we would be healthy

He is as old as his class-mate, but not so learned

Charles is esteemed, because he is both discreet and benevolent.

We will stay till he arrives.

He retires to rest soon, that he may rise early.

We ought to be thankful, for we have received much.

Though he is often advised, yet he does not reform.

Reproof either softens or hardens its object.

Neither prosperity nor adversity has improved him.

He can acquire no virtue, unless he make some sacrifices.

Let him that standeth take heed lest he fall.

If thou wert his superior, thou shouldst not have boasted.

He will be detected,
though he deny the fact.

If he has promised, he should act accordingly.

She will transgress,
unless she be admonished.

If he were encouraged, he would amend.

Tho' he condemn me,
I will respect him.

Their talents are more brilliant than useful.

Notwithstanding his poverty, he is a wise and worthy person.

If our desires are moderate, our wants will be few.

Hope often amuses,
but seldom satisfies
us.

Though he is lively,
yet he is not volatile.

O, peace! how desirable art thou!

I have been often occupied, alas! with trifles.

Strange! that we should be so infatuated.

O! the humiliations to which vice reduces us.

Hark! how sweetly
the woodlark sings!
Ah! the delusions of hope.

Hail, simplicity! source of genuine joy.

Behold! how pleasant
it is for brethren to dwell together in unity.

Welcome again! my long lost friend.

The following are a few instances of the same word's constituting several of the parts of speech.

Calm was the day, and the scene delightful.

We may expect a calm after a storm.

To prevent passion, is easier than to calm it.

Better is a little with content, than a great deal with anxiety.

The gay and dissolute think little of the miseries, which are stealing softly after them.

A little attention will rectify some errors.

He laboured to still the tumult.

Still waters are commonly deepest.

Though he is out of danger, he is still afraid.

Damp air is unwholesome.

Guilt often casts a damp over our sprightliest hours.

A soft body damps
the sound much more than a hard one.

Though she is rich and fair, yet she is not amiable.

They are yet young,
and must suspend
their judgment yet
a while.

Many persons are better than we suppose them to be.

The few and the many have their prepossessions.

Few days pass without some clouds.

Much money is corrupting.

Think much, and speak little.

He has seen much of the world, and been much carested.

His years are more than hers; but he has not more knowledge.

The more we are blessed, the more grateful we should be.

The desire of getting more is rarely satisfied.

He has equal knowledge, but inferior judgment.

She is his inferior in sense, but his equal in prudence.

We must make a like space between the lines.

Every being loves its like.

Behave yourselves like men.

We are too apt to like pernicious company. He may go or stay as he likes.

They strive to learn.

He goes to and fro.

To his wisdom we owe our privilege.

The proportion is ten to one.

He has served them with his utmost ability.

When we do our utmost, no more is required.

I will submit, for I know it brings peace. I have a regard for him.

It is for our health to be temperate.

O! for better times.      He is esteemed, both on his own account,
Both of them deserve      and on that of his praise.      parents.

CHAP. V.

All the Parts of Speech indiscriminately arranged.

DISSIMULATION in youth, is the forerunner of perfidy in old age. Its first appearance, is the fatal omen of growing depravity, and future shame.

If we possess not the power of self-government, we shall be the prey of every loose inclination that chances to arise. Pampered by continual indulgence, all our passions will become mutinous and headstrong. Desire, not reason, will be the ruling principle of our conduct.

Aburdly we spend our time in contending about the trifles of a day, while we ought to be preparing for a higher existence.

How little do they know of the true happiness of life, who are strangers to that intercourse of good offices and kind attentions which, by a pleasing charm, attaches men to one another, and circulates rational enjoyment from heart to heart.

If we view ourselves, with all our imperfections and failings, in a just light, we shall rather be surprised at our enjoying so many good things, than discontented, because there are any which we want.

True cheerfulness makes a man happy in himself, and promotes the happiness of all around him. It is the clear and calm sunshine of a mind illuminated by piety and virtue.

Wherever views of interest, and prospects of return, mingle with the feelings of affection, sensibility acts an imperfect part, and entitles us to small share of commendation.

Let not your expectations from the years that are to come, rise too high; and your disappointments will be fewer, and more easily supported.

To live long, ought not to be our favourite wish, so much as to live well. By continuing too long on earth, we might only live to witness a greater number of melancholy scenes, and to expose ourselves to a wider compass of human woe.

How many pass away some of the most valuable years of their lives, tost in a whirlpool of what cannot be called pleasure, so much as mere giddiness and folly.

Look round you with attentive eye, and weigh characters well, before you connect yourselves too closely with any who court your society.

The true wisdom of man consists not in the multitude of riches, or the elevation of rank; for experience shows, that these may be possessed by the worthless, as well as by the deserving.

Beauty of form has often betrayed its possessor. The flower is easily blasted. It is short-lived at the best; and trifling, at any rate, in comparison with the higher, and more lasting beauties of the mind.

A contented temper opens a clear sky, and brightens every object around us. It is in the sullen and dark shade of discontent, that noxious passions, like venomous animals, breed and prey upon the heart.

Thousands, whom indolence has sunk into contemptible obscurity, might have come forward to usefulness and honour, if idleness had not frustrated the effect of all their powers.

Sloth is like the slowly-flowing, putrid stream, which stagnates in the marsh, breeds venomous animals, and poisonous plants; and infects with pestilential vapours the whole country round it.

Disappointments derange, and overcome, vulgar minds. The patient and the wife, by a proper improvement, frequently make them contribute to their high advantage.

Sobriety of mind is one of those virtues, which the present condition of human life strongly inculcates. The uncertainty of its enjoyments, checks presumption; the multiplicity of its dangers, demands perpetual caution. Moderation, vigilance, and self-government, are duties incumbent on all; but especially on such as are beginning the journey of life.

The charms and comforts of virtue are inexpressible; and can only be justly conceived by those who possess her. The consciousness of Divine approbation and support, and the steady hope of future happiness, communicate a peace and joy, to which all the delights of the world bear no resemblance.

If we knew how much the pleasures of this life deceive and betray their unhappy votaries; and reflected on the disappointments in pursuit, the dissatisfaction in enjoyment, or the uncertainty of possession, which every where attend them; we should cease to be enamoured with such brittle and transient joys: and should wisely fix our hearts on those virtuous attainments, which the world can neither give nor take away.

Order is Heav'n's first law; and this confess,
Some are, and must be, greater than the rest,
More rich, more wise; but who infers from hence,
That such are happier, shocks all common sense.

Needful austerities our wills restrain;
As thorns fence in the tender plant from harm.

Reason's whole pleasure, all the joys of sense,
Lie in three words, health, peace, and competence:
But health consists with temperance alone;
And peace, Oh, virtue! peace is all thy own.

On earth nought precious is obtain'd,
But what is painful too;
By travel and so travel born,
Our sabbaths are but few.

Who noble ends by noble means obtains,
Or failing, smiles in exile or in chains,
Like good Aurelius let him reign, or bleed
Like Socrates, that man is great indeed.

Our hearts are fasten'd to this world,
By strong and endless ties;

But every sorrow cuts a string,
And urges us to rise.

Oft pining cares in rich brocades are drest,
And diamonds glitter on an anxious breast.

Teach me to feel another's woe,
To hide the fault I see;
That mercy I to others show,
That mercy show to me.

This day be bread, and peace, my lot:
All else beneath the sun
Thou know'st if best bestow'd or not,
And let thy will be done.

Vice is a monster of so frightful mien,
As, to be hated, needs but to be seen:
Yet seen too oft, familiar with her face,
We first endure, then pity, then embrace.

If nothing more than purpose in thy power,
Thy purpose firm, is equal to the deed:
Who does the best his circumstance allows,
Does well, acts nobly; angels could no more.

In faith and hope the world will disagree,
But all mankind's concern is charity.

To be resign'd when ills betide,
Patient when favours are denied,
And pleas'd with favours giv'n:
Most surely this is Wisdom's part,
This is that incense of the heart,
Whose fragrance smells to Heav'n.

All fame is foreign, but of true desert ;
Plays round the head, but comes not to the heart :
One self-approving hour whole years outweighs
Of stupid flatters, and of loud huzzas ;
And more true joy Marcus'us exil'd feels,
Than Cæsar with a senate at his heels.

Far from the madling crowd's ignoble strife,
Their sober wishes never learn'd to stray ;
Along the cool sequester'd vale of life,
They kept the noiseless tenor of their way.

What nothing earthly gives, or can destroy,
The soul's calm sunshine, and the heartiest joy,
Is virtue's prize.

Pity the sorrows of a poor old man,
Whose trembling limbs have borne him to thy door,
Whose days are dwindled to the shortest span ;
Oh ! give relief, and Heav'n will bless thy store.

Who lives to nature, rarely can be poor :
Who lives to fancy, never can be rich.

When, young, life's journey I began,
The glittering prospect charm'd my eyes ;
I saw, along th' extended plain,
Joy after joy successive rise.

But soon I found 'twas all a dream ;
And learn'd the fond pursuit to shun,
Where few can reach their purpos'd aim,
And thousands daily are undone.

'Tis greatly wise to talk with our past hours ;
And ask them, what report they bore to Heav'n.

All nature is but art, unknown to thee;
 All chance, direction, which thou canst not see;
 All discord, harmony, not understood;
 All partial evil, universal good.

Heav'n's choice is safer than our own;
 Of ages past inquire.

What the most formidable fate?

“To have our own desire.”

If ceaseless, thus, the fowls of heav'n he feeds,
 If o'er the fields such lucid robes he spreads;
 Will he not care for you, ye faithless, say?
 Is he unwise? or, are ye less than they?

The spacious firmament on high,
 With all the blue etherial sky,
 And spangled heav'ns, a shining frame,
 Their great original proclaim:
 Th' unweari'd sun, from day to day,
 Does his Creator's power display,
 And publishes to ev'ry land,
 The work of an Almighty hand.

Soon as the ev'ning shades prevail,
 The moon takes up the wond'rous tale,
 And, nightly, to the list'ning earth,
 Repeats the story of her birth:
 Whilst all the stars that round her burn,
 And all the planets in their turn,
 Confirm the tidings as they roll,
 And spread the truth from pole to pole.

What though, in solemn silence, all
 Move round the dark terrestrial ball!

What tho' nor real voice nor sound,
Amid their radiant orbs be found!
In Reason's ear they all rejoice,
And utter forth a glorious voice,
For ever singing as they shine,
"The hand that made us is Divine."

EXERCISES IN SYNTAX.

RULE I.

Fifty pounds of wheat contains forty pounds of flour.

What avails the best sentiments, if persons do not live suitably to them?

Thou should love thy neighbour, as sincerely as thou loves thyself.

RULE II.

Idleness and ignorance is the parent of many vices.

Patience and diligence, like faith, removes mountains.

What signifies the counsel and care of preceptors, when youth think they have no need of assistance?

RULE III.

Man's happiness or misery are, in a great measure, put into his own hands.

We are not such machines as a clock or watch, which move merely as they are moved.

Speaking impatiently to servants, or any thing that betrays inattention or ill-humour, are certainly criminal.

RULE IV.

The British Parliament are composed of King, Lords, and Commons.

A great number do not always argue strength.

The council was not unanimous, and it separated without coming to any determination.

RULE V.

They which seek wisdom will certainly find her.

I do not think that any person should incur censure, for being tender of their reputation.

Thou who has been a witness of the fact, can give an account of it.

RULE VI.

If he will not hear his best friend, whom shall be sent to admonish him?

The persons, who conscience and virtue support, may smile at the caprices of fortune.

From the character of those, who you associate with, your own will be estimated.

RULE VII.

Thou art the friend that hast often relieved me, and that has not deserted me now in the time of peculiar need.

I perceive that thou art a pupil who possessest bright parts, but who hast cultivated them but little.

RULE VIII.

These kind of indulgences soften and injure the mind.

Instead of improving yourselves, you have been playing this two hours.

Those sort of favours did real injury, under the appearance of kindness.

RULE IX.

The fire, the air, the earth, and the water, are four elements of the philosophers.

We are placed here under a trial of our virtue.

The profligate man is seldom or never found to be, the good husband, the good father, or the beneficent neighbour.

RULE X.

Thy ancestors virtue is not thine.

Thy fathers offence will not condemn thee.

A mothers tendernefs and a fathers care,
are natures gifts' for mans advantage.

A mans manner's frequently influence his fortune.

RULE XI.

He was pleasing not often, because he was vain.

William nobly acted, though he was unsuccessful.

We may happily live, though our possessions be small.

RULE XVI.

Be honest, nor take no shape nor semblance of disguise.

There cannot be nothing more insignificant than vanity.

The measure is so exceptionable, that we cannot by no means permit it.

RULE XVII.

We are all accountable creatures, each for himself.

Does that boy know who he speaks to?
Who does he offer such language to?

It was not he that they were so angry with.

RULE XVIII.

My brother and him are tolerable grammarians.

Did he not tell thee his fault, and entreated thee to forgive him?

If a man say, I love God, and hateth his brother, he is a liar.

RULE XIX.

Though he urges me yet more earnestly, I shall not comply, unless he advances more forcible reasons.

She disapproved the measure, because it were very improper.

Though the fact be extraordinary, it certainly did happen.

RULE XX.

The business was much better executed by his brother than he.

They are much greater gainers than me by this unexpected event.

They know how to write as well as him; but he is a much better grammarian than them.

RULE XXI.

These counsels were the dictates of virtue, and the dictates of true honour.

We must guard against either too great severity, or facility of manners.

Verily, there is a reward for the righteous! There is a God that judgeth in the earth.

By these happy labours, they who sow and reap will rejoice together.

RULE XXII.

He is more bold, and active, but not so wise and studious as his companion.

Sincerity is as valuable, and even more valuable, than knowledge.

Neither has he, nor any other persons, suspected so much dissimulation.

Several alterations and additions have been made to the work.

The FIFTH Edition improved.

Price, bound, 3s.

Publications by L. Murray.

“ This is a publication of much merit, and fully answers the professions in the Title. The Appendix contains some of the best Rules for writing elegantly, and with propriety, that we recollect to have seen.”

Monthly Review, July, 1796.

“ This Grammar is, on many accounts, entitled to commendatory notice. Its materials have been carefully and judiciously selected; its arrangement is distinct, and well adapted to the purpose of instruction; and its expression is simple, perspicuous, and accurate. The Compiler has observed a due medium between extreme conciseness, and extreme minuteness of detail; and he has very properly distinguished the leading heads from their subordinate illustrations, by printing them in a larger letter, &c.

See the character at large in the Analytical Review, June, 1796.

“ There appears, in this Grammar, a considerable share of judicious analysis and arrangement. The author applies his philological rules, with great success, to some of the more striking anomalies in English phraseology.”

Extract from the British Critic, Nov. 1796.

“ We have, on a former occasion, expressed the satisfaction that we derived from the first publication of this work; and we have only to add, concerning the present edition, that the alterations and additions, though not very large, are judicious, and therefore, so far, improvements; and that we consider the work as very superior to most, if not all, of its predecessors on the same subject.

“We have been much pleased with the perusal of these Exercises. They occupy, with distinguished excellence, a most important place in the Science of the English Language; and, as such, we can warmly recommend them to the teachers of schools, as well as to all those who are desirous of attaining correctness and precision in their native tongue.”

Monthly Review, July, 1797.

“For a particular account of the very useful English Grammar, to which these Exercises refer, we must request our readers to turn back to Review, Vol. xxiii. page 646. The value of that work is greatly increased by this large collection of examples, under the heads above-mentioned.—They are selected with great judgment, and very happily adapted to the purpose of correcting common errors in writing and speaking: they afford the learner a large field of employment: which, carefully gone through, either in writing or orally, will not fail to produce a habit of attention to accuracy.—With respect to the matter, as well as the language of these examples, we are much pleased with the Author's choice: both vulgarity and peculiarity of sentiment, are judiciously avoided."

Extract from the Analytical Review, Sept. 1797.

"These Exercises are, in general, well calculated to promote the purpose of information, not only with regard to orthography and punctuation, but also in point of phraseology, syntax, and precise perspicuity of composition." Critical Review, October, 1797.

"This book has been accidentally mislaid; but we willingly repeat the praise we formerly gave the Author for his English Grammar. There is great judgment shown in these Exercises; and, what is no common merit, the greatest perspicuity in the adaptation of the examples to the several rules."

British Critic, November, 1798.

Young persons who have left school, as well as persons more advanced in life, and who have not attained a competent knowledge of English Grammar, and the principles of accurate composition, may, by carefully perusing these Exercises, and comparing them with the Key, readily become their own instructors, and considerably improve themselves, in this important branch of Literature. To render the corrections obvious and intelligible to all readers, the Key, which is necessary to the work, not only repeats every sentence at large in its corrected form, but mostly distinguishes the variations, by Italic characters.
